1. [redacted] the Russians are somewhat suspicious of Grotewohl's trips to, and connections with, the West. In the first part of May 1947, [redacted] Grotewohl's task lay principally in the Soviet Zone; it was the Russians who laid down the broad line of policy, and they consequently regarded any amateurish interference on Grotewohl's part as extremely undesirable. [redacted]
2. [redacted] mail from the western zones is very often censored by the SMA. [redacted] this is another indication of the Russians' suspicion and dislike of Grotewohl.
